

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

THE NOONTIDE

THE Morning-star is fled; the golden light
Of early day on fragrant opening flowers,
The dewy freshness of life's youthful powers
Have left us; full upon our brows doth smite
The blaze of noon, intolerably bright.
Few birds sing now; the heavy-freighted hours
Bring toil and care. The Noon, the Noon is ours!
The clocks strike loud and to fresh tasks invite.

Look on your fields, O labourers of the day!
The harvests whiten. Some without reward
Faint by the way. Some voices silent are
That sang with us our morning-music gay.
Enough, enough if in thy field, O Lord!
We toil, not vainly, till the Evening-star.

THEODORE C. WILLIAMS.

PREFACE

CLASSMATES: The twenty-five years, which have passed since the Class of 1876 graduated, have brought such great changes to Harvard that, upon revisiting it, we hardly recognize our old college.

Entering only three years after the accession of President Eliot, we found his energy at work building a new superstructure upon the old foundation. During Freshman year we were permitted to pursue our required studies with our minds unfretted by the necessity of choosing for ourselves, but the three succeeding years compelled us to get out of leading strings. We were given a broad choice of elective studies; our attendance at our courses was made voluntary. As is well known, this liberal system has, with certain wise regulations, been made still more liberal, and its principles have, through the changes in the entrance requirements, been extended into the secondary schools. The general principle has been adopted by the College that a Bachelor's degree is necessary for admission to all professional courses of study. This makes it important that the conditions for admission to the College or Scientific School shall be liberally conceived.

Mr. W. C. Lane, in the "Report of the Class of 1881," says: "The requirements of 1881 allow the substitution in the place of Greek of a considerable amount of scientific study, including some advanced mathematics, but do not allow the substitution of any modern language or of history. Japanese students may substitute an examination in the Japanese language and literature for English, in the Chinese language and literature for elementary Greek, and in English for elementary Latin; while students and graduates of the Imperial University of Japan might be admitted without examination."

J. W. Morris Apr. 25, 1910 $606

Our young Roman of the East, the Japanese, as well as his American fellow-student, can, if he chooses, do the work required for a degree in three years. Some of the old leisure classes took five or six years in their pursuit of an ever evading degree. It is even planned to have two Commencements a year. Since the prohibition of rum punch, two such days may safely be permitted.

The numerous scholars who make up the present classes, each of which is almost as large as the four in our day, find their joyous youth cramped by a "College Bible" of only three pages, while eleven pages of regulations were considered necessary for our discipline. The idlers are carefully watched by the Faculty, particularly the wise and kindly Dean Briggs (H. C., 1875), who keeps in close touch with the student and who, "while he hates the sin, loves the sinner."

The growth of the College is exemplified by the new buildings and grounds. Major Henry L. Higginson (h., 1882) has made his name one of eternal delight to all Harvard men by his gift of the great "Soldiers' Field"—the playground of the University—on the Brighton side of the Charles, and later by erecting upon the estate bequeathed to the College by the late Henry C. Warren (H. C., 1879) the Harvard Union, containing "a hall for the musical clubs and debating societies, offices for the college publications and the managers of the athletic organizations, baths, and a swimming tank, a billiard-room, lounging and reading room, a restaurant, a large assembly room, a trophy room, and a few suites of rooms to be used in entertaining visitors."

The Union is nearly completed, and it will be opened this year. It cannot be doubted that it will do a great service in dignifying the social life of the University and in bringing Harvard men together into greater "social efficiency."

Two interesting buildings have been designed by members of our Class. Randall Hall by Wheelwright (E. M.) and Haven; a second dining hall has been built on the corner of Kirkland Street and Divinity Avenue. It is a building of brick and stone, in the Georgian style of architecture. The Foxcroft Club occupies it, and its function is to supply meals for students à la carte. The food is wonderfully good and cheap, and the students are waited upon by fellow-members who receive in return credits applicable for payment of their own board. Phillips Brooks House, by A. W. Longfellow, the home of the religious societies and the scene of such social festivities as are officially provided for the students, has been constructed in the northwest corner of the yard, opposite the Gymnasium. Longfellow is also the architect selected for the Semitic Museum on Divinity Avenue, and the new dormitory, Bertram Hall, for Radcliffe College.

On the Soldiers' Field a base-ball cage has been built, with money allowed by the Corporation in consideration of the surrender to it of the Carey Building for the use of the department of Mining and Metallurgy. The Newell Memorial Gate has been built on the northeast corner of the Soldiers' Field, and the field has been surrounded by an iron fence with brick and plaster posts. A new boat-house has been built upon the Brighton side of the river. The banks of the Charles have been taken for parkways by the City of Cambridge and by the Metropolitan Park Commission.

In addition, the following buildings are now under construction: an "Architectural Building," for the department of Architecture, on the corner of Broadway and Quincy Street; a building for the department of Engineering, on Oxford Street; a new section of the University Museum (the southwestern corner), on Oxford Street; and an Infirmary, on Mount Auburn Street, near the Cambridge Hospital.

The classes have taken hold, with a will, of the idea suggested by our Class of enclosing the yard with gates and a fence of iron with brick and stone posts. There are but two locations ungranted about the old quadrangle from the Meyer Gate to the corner of Quincy Street.

Among the other buildings which have been constructed since 1876 may be mentioned: Austin Hall, for the Law School; Seaver Hall, for lectures; the Gymnasium; Jefferson Hall; the great additions to the Agassiz Museum; the Fogg Museum of Fine Arts; the new dormitories; Hastings, Perkins, and Conant halls; the new Medical School in Boston (which has already been outgrown). Private enterprise has constructed several beautiful dormitories, of which the first was Beck Hall. The others are on or near Mount Auburn Street, and the social life of the College is now centred outside of the yard.

Small social clubs have multiplied, and the Porcellian, Hasty Pudding, A. D., $\Delta\Delta\Phi$, and $\Delta\Phi$ have built new houses, while the other clubs, old and new, have adapted old houses to their uses.

There is to-day a great general interest in athletics, and a system of management, both of finances and of the teams, has been devised which has proved to be effective. The great expenditures are covered by the gate receipts, and the excess has been used for the improvement of Soldiers' Field.

For almost all these details I am indebted to interesting articles by W. C. Lane (H. C., 1881), the librarian, and by Professor J. H. Beale of 1882, in the latest reports of their respective class secretaries. I regret that lack of space forbids a longer account of Harvard's marvellous growth in the last twenty-five years, during which we have been facing "the busy world's reality." It is the province of the "Harvard Graduates' Magazine" to keep us informed of Harvard's development and life, and I heartily recommend all to subscribe to that excellent chronicle.

Of the one hundred and forty-two men graduating in our year, twenty-six are dead; of the fifty-nine temporary members, twenty are dead, and six—A. R. Dillon, W. H. Parsons, F. M. Porter, F. P. Ward, J. E. Welch, A. H. Wetherbee—have not reported since graduation, and nothing is known of them by the Secretary; six—J. F. Burris, F. H. Drew, W. E. Lufkin, W. E. Lynn, L. V. Miller, N. A. Taylor—have not been heard from by the Secretary for five years.

There will be many vacant chairs at our festival. Many of our brightest and best are gone; yet we have glad memories of them, which should bind us together with sacred ties. Since our last report of 1896 we have lost Brown, Holman, Hooper, Sleeper, and S. G. Ward; G. A. Blymyer, Morris, Nichols, and Perry. Biographical sketches of all our dead members are given in this Report.

The Secretary desires to thank the members for their prompt response to his circulars and to his requests for additional subscriptions to the Class Fund. The expenses of this year will somewhat reduce our small fund, but enough will remain to carry us through the celebrations of the next twenty-five years.

It is hoped that the Class, like the pensioners of Uncle Sam and like King Charles the Second, will be an "unconscionable time a-dying," and that in 1926 a goodly array of old fellows of threescore years and ten will assemble to make merry with the small residue of the treasure, which Billy Chase with so much patience collected from us, for us.

JOHN T. WHEELWRIGHT.

RECORD OF THE CLASS
1876-1901

RECORD OF THE CLASS †

DANIEL WEBSTER ABERCROMBIE

Son of Milo Bolling and Sarah Carroll (Greenleaf) Abercrombie: born at Bolling Green, Alabama, November 25, 1853: prepared for college at the Cambridge Latin School.

HE was after graduation at Harvard Law School until February, 1877, when he went to St. Mark's School, Southborough, Massachusetts, as instructor, until June, 1878. In September, 1878, began to teach at the Vermont Academy, Saxton's River, Vermont, and taught there until March, 1882, when he was appointed classical instructor in the Worcester Academy, Worcester, Massachusetts, of which, in November, 1882, he was elected acting principal, and in June, 1883, was elected principal. In June, 1883, received honorary degree A.M. from Brown University, and in 1898 the degree of LL.D. from Colby College. He is a member of Head-masters' Association, Conference Colleges and Secondary Schools, Harvard Teachers' Association, Northern Baptist Educational Society, and of the Board of Trustees of the Worcester Academy.

He writes: "My published literary work consists only of occasional papers and addresses on educational subjects which have appeared in various magazines.

"I have made six different visits to Europe between the years 1885 and 1896. On one occasion I remained abroad a year and held a position as representative (honorary) from the U. S. Department of Education to inspect secondary educational institutions in England, Germany, and France. Four months were spent in examining the methods and equipment of secondary schools in Germany. An equal amount of time was spent in travel and study in Italy and Greece. While in the latter country I was by courtesy a member of the German Imperial Archæological Institute in Athens, and accompanied Dr. Wilhelm Dörpfeld on an expedition, largely on horseback, through central Greece and the Peloponnesus."

HARCOURT AMORY

Son of James Sullivan and Mary Copley (Greene) Amory: born at Brookline, Massachusetts, February 10, 1855: prepared for college at Mr. G. W. C. Noble's School, Boston.

HE travelled in Europe for a year after graduation, and since then has been in business. He is now treasurer of the Lancaster (Cotton) Mills and of the Indian Head Mills of Alabama. Was formerly captain on staff of the General of Second Brigade M. V. M., and was a member of the First Corps Cadets M. V. M. Is a trustee of the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge. He has also been to Europe for the summers of 1887 and 1891.

DANIEL CARPENTER BACON

Son of Eben and Susan G. (Low) Bacon: born at Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, July 2, 1854: prepared for college at Boston Latin School.

AFTER graduation went into the office of Lee, Higginson & Co., Boston, but soon went West to engage in banking and stock-raising in Wyoming. He is now president of the First National Bank of Laramie, Wyoming, First National Bank, Rock Springs, Wyoming, Laramie Electric Gas Light and Fuel Company, Wyoming Central Land and Improvement Company, and Riverside Live Stock Company.

He writes: "Have travelled extensively since graduation, both in the United States and Europe, with Laramie, Wyoming, as my headquarters, where I am at present and expect to remain."

THURLOW WEED BARNES

Son of William and Emily (Weed) Barnes: born at Albany, New York, June 28, 1853: prepared for college at Cambridge, Massachusetts.

JOINED the class June, 1873. After graduation went on the staff of the "Evening Journal" at Albany, New York, and was active in editorial and political work until 1883, when he wrote a life of Thurlow Weed, which was published in 1884 by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. In 1884 and 1885 he made a tour of the world. Returned to Albany in 1886 and was elected chairman of the Republican General Committee. In December, 1887, went to Boston, joining the firm of Houghton, Mifflin & Co. as a partner, April 1, 1888. In 1891 and 1892 travelled extensively in the Far East, and in 1893 took up his residence in New York City, where he now lives. Active in local politics; leader of the xxvth Assembly District in 1895; member of Republican State, County, and Congressional Committees; delegate to Republican National Convention in 1896. He then withdrew from politics. In April, 1898, negotiated for the so-called "Brice Syndicate" contracts with the Chinese Government for a railway from the city of Hankow to the city of Canton and other important concessions in China; is the only American who ever succeeded in securing such concessions. Organized a new China syndicate in 1899, and in 1900, when the "Boxer" troubles began in China, his engineers, headed by Auguste Mathez, of Denver, narrowly escaped from Mongolia, where they had begun work, under grants for minerals. In 1901 went into mining in Montana, in which he is now engaged, as president of two corporations. Club membership: Metropolitan, New York; Ocean County Hunt, Lakewood, New Jersey; Fort Orange, Albany, New York.

✱ FRANK WHEELER BARRETT

Son of Richard and Lois Jane (Wheeler) Barrett: born at Manchester, Vermont, March 10, 1855: prepared for college at Concord High School: died at Concord, Massachusetts, September 18, 1878.

AT time of his death he was studying law at the Boston University. He was prominent in social affairs in his town, and greatly interested in its history. Was fond of outdoor life and took great pleasure in working on his father's farm during vacation. He was an active member of Concord Artillery, Company C, Fifth Regiment M. V. M., at the time of his death, and had been for several years. He was very fond of music, and, while not a trained singer, had a good voice, and often took part in concerts and entertainments. While not active in athletics at college, he was greatly interested in them, and in his own town was quite celebrated in this line. He frequently took part in rowing contests, and at an athletic meet July 4, 1876, he won the hundred-yard dash and mile run, both in good time, from many competitors. He died of peritonitis at Concord, Massachusetts, September 18, 1878.

Barrett was modest, of retiring disposition, and was much beloved by those who knew him intimately.

CHARLES HENRY BARROWS

Son of Charles Barrows and Lydia (Smith) Barrows: born at Springfield, Massachusetts, August 4, 1853: prepared for college at the High School of Springfield.

GRADUATED at the Harvard Law School, June, 1878, and was admitted to the bar, March 19, 1879. Practises law in Springfield. August 1, 1881, appointed assistant attorney-general of Massachusetts, which position he held to 1883. He was president of the International Young Men's Christian Association Training School.

Memberships: College Society—Everett Athenæum; O. K.; Signet (honorary); Phi Beta Kappa, delegate from Harvard to National Council of Phi Beta Kappa, 1898; American Economic Association; Republican Club of Massachusetts.

Travels: Spent summer of 1895 in Great Britain with wife. Wrote letters of travel to the "Springfield Republican," to which he has contributed more or less editorially, mainly on legal, economic, and political topics, for twenty years. Has written somewhat for legal periodicals, contributing to the "American Law Review," "The Maxim, 'Res inter alios acta': its Place in the Law of Evidence"; reprinted in the "Irish Law Times" and "Solicitor's Journal."

Some cases: Gleason, State Treasurer, vs. McKay, 134 Mass. 419 (constitutional law). Com. vs. Costello (murder; for defence). "The Andover Case" (heresy), in which he was one of the counsel for the professors.

Has found some outlet for patriotism in the national campaigns, in which he has with two exceptions taken some active part. He is an opponent of imperialism, and sees now at work the same causes that brought about the downfall of Rome.

CHARLES JOHN BELL

Son of Luther V. and Frances Clark (Pinkerton) Bell: born at Somerville, Massachusetts, October 2, 1854: prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy.

STUDIED in Germany, November, 1876, to August, 1881. Graduate student Johns Hopkins University, 1881-82. Fellow Johns Hopkins University, 1882. Professor of chemistry Pennsylvania State College, 1882-85. Fellow by courtesy Johns Hopkins University, 1885. Professor of chemistry in University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Minneapolis Club.

MARCUS PERCIVAL BENNETT

Son of James and Sarah (Heselden) Bennett: born at Peabody, Massachusetts, July 22, 1854: prepared for college at Chauncy Hall School, Boston.

WENT to California in April, 1877. Was in Colorado for nearly a year and a half in the office of Jerome and O'Brien, Denver; then returned to California. Admitted to the bar, July 16, 1879, and has practised law in Placerville since October, 1880. Formerly district attorney, El Dorado County; now judge of the Superior Court in the same county.

He writes: "I was elected judge of Superior Court of El Dorado County, November 4, 1890, for term of six years and re-elected for a similar term November 3, 1896, which term I am now serving, and residing at Placerville."

JOHN KING BERRY

Son of Nehemiah Chase (Dartmouth, 1839) and Hannah Howe King (daughter of John King, H. U., 1801) Berry: born at Randolph, Massachusetts, November 8, 1854: prepared for college at Roxbury Latin School.

STUDENT at law for three years; admitted to the bar of Suffolk County, Massachusetts, January, 1880; admitted to practice in U. S. courts and in the courts of Montana. Member of Boston Bar Association; now a member of firm of Berry and Upton in general law practice, and attorneys for the Master Builders Association of Boston; a 32nd degree Mason; Past Master of Washington Lodge, F. and A. M.; member of Apollo Club (Musical); member of Boston Shakespeare Club; ex-president of Harvard Improvement Association of Dorchester; trustee of Harvard Congregational Society of Dorchester. Eldest son, Harold Hail, now in Harvard College, 1904.

EDWARD BICKNELL

Son of William Emery and Rebecca Jane (Richmond) Bicknell: born at Boston, Massachusetts, October 22, 1855: prepared for college at Boston Latin School.

ENTERED Harvard Law School, September, 1876; received degree LL.B. in 1878. Stayed an extra year in the Law School, and received degree of A. M. in 1879. Entered the office of Proctor, Warren and Brigham, September, 1879, and was admitted to the bar in Suffolk County in Supreme Court, November 15, 1879. Opened an office in Boston, October, 1880. Moved to Orange, Massachusetts, in 1891; trial justice for Franklin County, 1891 to 1894. Returned to Boston, 1894. Moved to present residence in Hartford, Maine, 1895. Has been engaged, in addition to the usual pursuits of a country life, in more or less literary work. Besides some contributions to local periodicals, has contributed an article to "Appleton's Popular Science Monthly," and published "The Territorial Acquisitions of the United States." Was a member of II H in college.

SAMUEL McCULLY BLACK

Born at Amherst, Nova Scotia, January 28, 1846.

RECEIVED degree of A. B., Acadia (Nova Scotia), 1874. The winter after graduation was spent at Newton (Massachusetts) Theological Seminary. In November, 1877, became pastor of the Baptist Church, Berwick, Nova Scotia; then at Liverpool, Nova Scotia; then Westport; then, in 1885, Kentville. Received degree M. ✱GEORGE HILLARD BRADFORD

Son of Charles F. and Eliza E. Bradford: born at Roxbury, Massachusetts, February 16, 1854: prepared for college at the Roxbury Latin School.

AT school, Bradford was always a leader at play and in work. He did well all that manly boys love to do; his friendship was eagerly sought, and his was the first place in the critical republic of boys. And in college, as all of us can testify, a like place was accorded the modest and kindly youth. A deep interest in his class and college marked his course. He did well in his studies, but he excelled in his performance of the many social duties which are not reckoned in the rank-list. Every kind of a position of trust was given to him by his college mates, and he did his duty in each cheerfully and well; in maturer life, the same trust in his fidelity was shown by all who met him.

He travelled in Europe for a few months after graduating, and returned to the Harvard Law School in the autumn of 1876. He took his degree of LL. B. in 1879, and began the practice of his profession in Boston the same year, making a specialty of conveying. In 1883 he formed a partnership with Mr. S. Parkman Blake, Jr., for the management and sale of real estate in Boston, and he continued in the successful prosecution of this business until the day of his death, February 17, 1890, when he was instantly killed by an electric car while he was riding on Beacon Street.

Bradford's rare grace of manner, which sprang from a sincere heart, endeared him to all who knew him.

Member of Cumberland Club, Portland Yacht Club, and secretary of Harvard Club in Maine.

✠HENRY HOBART BROWN

Son of Henry and Margaret Jane (Ross) Brown: born at Radnor, Pennsylvania, March 6, 1854: prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy.

WAS a member of the Institute of 1770, the Hasty Pudding Club, and rowed on his class and club crew.

On August 17, 1899, Henry Hobart Brown died at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, after a brief illness. By his death the class loses one of its strong men and one who had done and was doing at the time of his death a great work for education in the city of Philadelphia. After years of hard work he had established a school for fitting boys for college, which is a credit to the city as well as to its founder, and he had built a school building, equal, if not superior, to any building of its type in the country. Brown had a ready wit, unfailing good spirits, and a vigorous, manly nature. Generous, open-hearted, free from all cowardice, either mental or moral, he could not fail to impress those with whom he came in contact; his influence over the boys of his school was always helpful and he inspired them with great affection while holding their highest respect. His precept as well as his example pointed to manliness and courage in things both great and small.

That he was appreciated in his home city may be seen from the following extract taken from an editorial notice of him in one of the daily papers of Philadelphia:

"The whole community, as well as the cause of education, has suffered a heavy loss in the sudden death of Henry Hobart Brown, in the fulness of his activities and his powers. In itself, to create a great school is no small achievement. In the face of many discouragements, fighting against heavier odds than any one ignorant of the peculiar difficulties of the task can readily appreciate, Mr. Brown, by the sheer force of his own personality, built up from small beginnings a school which stands with the best institutions of its kind. He did this with no help from outside, without an endowment, and without the support of any especial class in the community. He had able assistants, indeed, who seconded his efforts, and who caught something of his own courageous spirit and lofty aims, but the work was accomplished by him alone; its success, after all, was due to a man who gave to his life-work courage, singleness of purpose, an undeviating adherence to high standards, and an enthusiasm which over-rode defeat. It was an honest success in a day when much that we call success is specious; the legitimate result of a great work honestly and quietly done.

"Mr. Brown carried the same high qualities into the world beyond the school-room, seeing the right thing clearly, and doing the right as he saw it without fear."

WILLIAM ALBERT BROWNLOW

Son of Joseph and Mary Brownlow: born at Cambridge, Massachusetts, May 19, 1854: prepared for college at Cambridge High School.

GRADUATED from Harvard Law School in 1878. Admitted to the bar, November 15, 1879. In 1885 gave up practice of law and entered the Boston Custom House, where he is assistant weigher in one of Boston's three districts. Member of several Masonic bodies.

Went abroad in January, 1882, and remained until November, 1883, studying medicine in Berlin, Paris, Edinburgh, Dublin, and London. Went to California in April, 1884; first settled in Anaheim, Los Angeles County, Southern California. Was president of the Orange County Medical Society and health officer. Has made a thorough study of the flora of California.

WILLIAM HARRY BURBANK

Son of William H. and Elizabeth (Kendal) Burbank: born at Lowell, Massachusetts, October 18, 1853: prepared for college at Boston Latin and Cambridge (Massachusetts) High Schools.

THE first year after graduation was spent in travelling; after that was a student at the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, where he graduated and was duly ordained. Was rector of the Episcopal Church at Woodsville, New Hampshire; from 1889 to 1891 was rector of St. Paul's Church, Brunswick, Maine. Had no parish from November, 1891, to May, 1892, when he went to St. Paul's Church, Columbus, Ohio, as assistant. In November, 1892, took charge of mission work in Bellaire and Martin's Ferry, Ohio. In June, 1893, became rector of St. Luke's Church, Cincinnati. Received degree of S. T. B., Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1880. Since leaving Cincinnati has served the parishes of Christ Church, Williamsport, Pennsylvania; St. Peter's, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; and St. Stephen's, Florence, New Jersey. In June, 1900, accepted the rectorship of St. Peter's, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

FRANK WESLEY BURNHAM

Son of Wesley and Mary (Douglas) Burnham: born at Boston, Massachusetts, September 13, 1855.

TAUGHT in private school in Manlius, New York, from fall of 1876 till fall of 1878. Taught in private school in Cincinnati till summer of 1880, and for a year or two after assisted numerous sub-freshmen in the capacity of "coach." Received degree LL. B., Cincinnati Law School, May, 1881, and the same month was admitted to the bar at Columbus, Ohio, practising law afterwards for a number of years. He is now in the wood acid business and sheep and cattle ranching.

He writes: "When I came to New York State from Ohio, I was admitted to the bar of this State at Special Term of Supreme Court at Utica in March, 1887. Have always kept my position as attorney at law, in good standing, but for a number of years attended strictly to other business and did not practise. I find myself now attending the courts more regularly. Have been postmaster for nearly fourteen years, have held some town offices, and am looking forward to office of county clerk before long.

"I own a large tract of land here and two good-sized farms. I am interested in the wood acid business and in the growth of hard-wood timber."

FRANK WOODRUFF CHAPIN

Son of Marvin and Marion (Cumins) Chapin: born at Erie, Pennsylvania, March 3, 1854: prepared for college at Erie High School.

AFTER graduation he entered Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York, graduating in 1879. HE is a publisher, 5 Hamilton Place, Boston. He writes: "Published writings, merely newspaper stuff and fugitive periodical and pamphlet matter. Nothing of the least importance or note.

"Clubs: Union and St. Botolph (Boston), University (New York), at present. Players (New York), University, Athletic, Roxbury, and Press (Boston), in the past.

"Nothing else. No wife, no children, no distinction, no political services, no journeys, nothing of interest. Yours, still contentedly, F. E. CHASE."

✱ WILLIAM LEVERETT CHASE

Son of Henry Savage and Sarah (Leverett) Chase: born at Grafton, Massachusetts, December 4, 1853: prepared for college at Brookline High School.

COLONEL William Leverett Chase, who died at his home in Brookline on October 7, 1895, after a long and distressing illness, was the son of Henry Savage Chase, who was born at Washington, District of Columbia, in 1825, graduated from Harvard in the class of 1848, and was, like his son, secretary of his class until his death. William's peculiar qualities of energy and kindliness early made him known to his classmates; and at his graduation, no member of his class was known and liked by a larger number of his classmates. He took high rank in college, where he was an editor of "The Magenta," afterwards "The Crimson," thus early evincing a taste for literary pursuits; but, upon graduation, the extensive manufacturing business founded by his father, which he was soon left to conduct alone, claimed for many years his exclusive attention. There is probably hardly a man in Boston who, having an extensive and complicated business thrust upon him at so early an age, has proved himself more equal to the responsibility and more successful in enlarging it.

He had in some respects the ideal of an older day; the church and the army were his main interests, though he never ceased to have a taste for letters, which, had he lived, it is more than probable would have guided him to some original work himself; for he had written in his leisure, and had been president of the Papyrus Club of Boston. But for many years before he had been junior warden of St. Paul's Church in Brookline, and trustee of the Church Home for Orphans and Destitute Children, and of the Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of Deceased Clergymen. He entered the First Corps of Cadets as a private, April 15, 1886, and gave much study to military affairs, particularly ordnance, tactics, and marksmanship; he wrote two treatises—on “Outpost Duty” and on “Marksmanship”—which attracted wide attention. He was soon appointed to the governor’s staff, and the appointment in his case was more than a political compliment; probably no officer in the state militia of recent years did more work and was of more actual service. His merits were so recognized that his appointment was renewed through one, if not more, changes of political parties, and followed by successive promotions until he became acting inspector-general. It was his custom frequently to go to England to witness the military manœuvres, where he met the officers highest in the British service; and his expert knowledge on many points was recognized and appreciated by officers of the regular army. At his death he was president of the Massachusetts Society of Sons of the Revolution. He had hardly left his military office when he was offered and accepted membership in the Metropolitan Park Commission; and the rapid and successful prosecution of that unequalled state work, which we are now only beginning to appreciate, was due in part to his energy. About the same time, while his name was being considered by the governor for a state directorship on the Fitchburg Railroad, he was elected by the stockholders a director; and his business abilities and judgment are further shown by the number of other important corporations of which he was an officer or director. Just before his death he was elected president of the Boston Commercial Club. Not yet twenty years out of college when he died, it is rare for any man to have done so much and in so many directions as did Colonel Chase. If one were to name the dominant notes of his character, they would be energy and kindliness; that kindliness which rises not only to generosity with money, but to intimate and active interest in all men who were known to him and seemed worthy, and to self-sacrificing labor for all high causes or works of public weal. His will contained many public bequests: his valuable collection of war medals to the Independent Corps of Cadets, an interesting library to the Papyrus Club, and many others, showing not only his generosity, but his peculiar thoughtfulness in all relations of life. Under certain circumstances, Harvard College becomes a residuary legatee to a very large amount, and receives immediately five thousand dollars to establish a scholarship, to be known as the Charles B. Porter Scholarship, in the Medical School.

✱STEVEN HENRY JECKO

Son of Joseph and Clara (Heinbach) Jecko: born at St. Louis, Missouri, April 6, 1852.

IN 1866 Jecko was employed by an uncle in the Pay Department, U.S.A., as a clerk at one hundred dollars a month, and starting from Omaha took the Union Pacific Railroad as far as Fort Kearney. The party was on the road from Fort Kearney nearly ten months, travelling in government ambulances with cavalry escort, and visiting and paying off troops at the frontier posts.

During the journey the party had several severe skirmishes with the Sioux under "Spotted Tail" and "Red Cloud," and they came upon the scene of the Phil Kearney massacre when the bodies of the one hundred and four victims were still warm. Two only of the command had escaped. After this terrible occurrence the "pay" party added fifty regulars and a band of hunters and trappers under Jim Bridges and Kit Carson to their number and carried with them two howitzers.

After one day's march they were attacked while in camp and drove off the Indians after a fight of two hours; the red-skins leaving seventeen dead on the field, while the "pay" party had one man shot through the shoulder.

After this adventurous journey, fighting with Indians and grizzlies in a manner to delight the heart of a boy of fourteen, Jecko returned to the Central High School in St. Louis, and in 1870 entered Washington University in the Freshman class. He tutored in Cambridge under Samuel Brierly to get up the Greek necessary for admission. He devoted himself to music in his college course under Professor Paine, and was double bass player in the Pierian Sodality for two years, and led it for two years. He was also a member of the Everett Athenæum and the II H.

Went through the St. Louis Law School; admitted to the bar, 1878, and became a partner in the law firm of Jecko, Hospes and Jecko, St. Louis, Missouri, but withdrew from the firm and removed to Washington, where he was a clerk in the General Land Office until July 1, 1893, and in the fall went to Enid, Oklahoma Territory. Here he died on March 18, 1896, in his forty-fourth year. An associate writes: "He was a man respected for his ability and integrity and good citizenship. A whole-souled, all-round good fellow."

At the time of his death he was one of the best-known citizens of Oklahoma and was the attorney for a large railroad. He possessed remarkable musical ability, as all of us remember, and was the composer of several well-known songs. He also did newspaper work on the "National Republican" and was a musical critic.

Thereafter, and until 1891, he practised law in Buffalo and was appointed United States commissioner for the Northern District of New York. In 1891 went to New York City to practise law, and resides there. In 1896, after competitive examination, open to all lawyers, was appointed assistant librarian of the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court, and in 1898 was made and is now librarian of the Bar Association of the City of New York.

SAMUEL DANA KITTREDGE

Son of Benjamin and Lucy (Dana) Kittredge: prepared for college at the Peekskill Military Academy.

MEMBER of University Club of New York, Harvard Club of New York, Ardsley Club of Ardsley-on-Hudson. Not in any business.

ELLIOT CABOT LEE

Son of Henry and Elizabeth Perkins (Cabot) Lee: born at Brookline, Massachusetts, April 16, 1854: prepared for college at Mr. G. W. C. Noble's School, Boston, 1866-72.

STUDIED in Harvard Law School from October, 1877, to June, 1879. Travelled in Europe from 1879 to September, 1881. In November, 1881, entered the office of Messrs. Shattuck, Holmes and Munroe, Boston, and was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in February, 1883. The following December he reports that he entered the Union Safe Deposit Vaults. In 1889 was in Europe travelling for nine months, and again in 1890 for six months. In May, 1891, started on a tour round the world—visiting Japan, China, Java, Burma, India, and Egypt, and after spending the spring and summer of 1892 in Europe, returned home in October, 1892. In 1894 revisited Europe, staying there from March till the middle of November. In 1899 retired from business entirely, and made a six months' tour in Europe, and has been at home since October, 1899, looking after a few trusts and his private property. No titles, offices, or publications. Member of St. Botolph, Tavern, and Athletic Clubs. In college was member of Institute and H. P. C.

✱ EDWARD BROWN LEFAVOUR

Son of Issachar and Lydia Ann (Ober) Lefavour: born at Beverly, November 25, 1854. He graduated from the Beverly High School in 1870, the first in the class. He afterwards attended the Salem High School and was first there also.

AT Harvard he took the course in mathematics and physics and was the first man of 1876. He bore his honors meekly. There was no taint of selfishness in his success. It was unobtrusive persistency and humble self-devotion of a pure and perfect mind that brought him to the front.

After graduation he returned to Harvard for further study until September, 1877, when he became instructor in the Jamaica Plain High School. April 1, 1878, he was appointed principal of the High School in Holbrook, Massachusetts, which position he held till July, 1880, when the love of study brought him again to Cambridge. In January, 1881, he went to Washington, District of Columbia, to become verifier of weights and measures, especially hydrometers, in the Bureau of Weights and Measures connected with the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. Here for five years, with an interest and thoroughness peculiar to him, he discharged what would seem to others monotonous duties.

In addition to this work on hydrometers he undertook in January, 1883, the superintendence of the measurement of star photographs for the Argentine National Observatory, then in charge of Dr. B. A. Gould. This work, requiring the closest observation and laborious calculation, was done with faultless accuracy. Into it he introduced valuable methods, and had almost completed an instrument by which the measurements could be more easily and expeditiously made by a system of rectangular co-ordinates than by the system of polar co-ordinates commonly used, but unfortunately he did not live to perfect it.

In December, 1885, he left Washington and returned to Cambridge, where he seemed to belong. Here he studied and continued the star work intrusted to his care, which he finished shortly before his death. During the last year he was also assistant in the Jefferson Physical Laboratory of Harvard University.

He was so conscientious and religious in his temperament that his thoughts for a while were turned towards the ministry, and he read considerable theology; but his friends had long thought him peculiarly fitted for scientific work, and he at last felt that his calling was in that direction. He was entering with fresh zeal and love and hope upon his life-work, when he was attacked with rheumatic fever of a typhoid form, which resulted in his death, May 18, 1889.

The principle of his life may be stated in a remembered saying of his, to the effect that he would be happy to take ten degrees square of the heavens, make photographs of the stars therein and spend his lifetime in discussing it. Every problem that occurred to him seemed to him worth spending his lifetime over, and he was ready to do it, no matter what the drudgery connected with it. He never dropped it. He was never satisfied with what was already known about a subject. He wanted to know more about it. He was one of the few men who are born investigators. He was not one who wished to make a show in the world. He did not care whether the world ever knew what he was doing. With a broad, clear mind, capable of treating thoroughly any subject presented to it, he was willing for the truth's sake to sink himself in the one subject before him. Such ability, with such devotion, is not often found, and the world, whose glare was nothing to him, is the darker because he is not in it who could give it more true light. B. O. P.

WILLIS DANIELS LELAND

Son of Edmund F. and Mary Lucretia (Cutter) Leland: born at Holliston, Massachusetts, March 30, 1854: prepared for college at Boston Latin School.

GRADUATED from the Andover Theological Seminary in 1879. Travelled in the West for a short time, and on his return settled (1880) in Amherst, New Hampshire. Has been a pastor at North Weymouth, Massachusetts, Exeter, New Hampshire, and of Pawtucket Church, Lowell, Massachusetts. Received the degree of Ph.D. in 1885 from Boston University. June 30, 1900, retired from active ministry on account of ill health.

FRANK SHALTER LIVINGOOD

Son of Jacob Peltzer and Lucy Jane (Shalter) Livingood

good: born at Reading, Pennsylvania, February 24, 1855: prepared for college at Phillips Andover Academy.

AFTER studying law in the office of his father, Jacob S. Livingood, Reading, Pennsylvania, was admitted to the bar and has since practised law in Reading. Engaged somewhat in politics. Chairman Republican County Committee, 1882-84; re-elected, June 19, 1886. Delegate to Republican National Convention of 1884. President Young Men's Christian Association since 1881. Is secretary and treasurer of the Mount Penn Gravity Railroad Company; secretary and treasurer of the Reading and Temple Railway Company, and secretary of the South Reading Market House Company. Has had nothing to do with politics since 1889, and devotes his time to law and general business.

GEORGE ASHLEY LONG

Son of George Washington and Mary Elizabeth (Nash) Long: born at Boston, Massachusetts, June 19, 1854: prepared for college at Epes Sargent Dixwell's Private School, Boston.

HAS been engaged in civil engineering. Was in the office of E. W. Bowditch until 1879. After an interval of recuperation, in September, 1881, he went South as engineer of construction on the Florida Southern Railway. He is notary public, county surveyor, and alderman of the town of Interlachen, Putnam County, Florida. He is an orange grower and farmer.

ALEXANDER WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW

Son of Alexander Wadsworth and Elizabeth (Porter) Longfellow: born at Portland, Maine, August 18, 1854: prepared for college at various schools in and about Portland, Maine.

AFTER graduation returned to Boston for the special architectural course in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and finished in 1878. Studied a year in the office of Cabot and Chandler, architects, Boston, and in 1879 went to Paris and entered the atelier of M. Emile Vaudremer, and later the Ecole des Beaux Arts, where he pursued his studies, with travelling interspersed, until the summer of 1881, which was spent in an extended sketching tour in France and Italy. He left the Ecole des Beaux Arts with sufficient "mentions" in drawing and architectural design to enter the first class; but in December, 1881, returned home, and early in the following year entered the office of Mr. H. H. Richardson, architect, Brookline, Massachusetts, where he passed four years. In March, 1886, he opened an office with Mr. A. B. Harlow, at No. 6 Beacon Street, Boston, and in the following year formed the partnership of Longfellow, Alden and Harlow, with a branch office at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Their most important work there is the Carnegie Public Library, gained in competition from designs made by him in Boston; also the Carnegie office building, Vandergrift and Conestoga buildings, the Duquesne Club, and many other buildings and houses in and about Pittsburg. The new City Hall, Carey Athletic Building, Winthrop Hall (for the Episcopal Theological School), the fire-proof house of E. H. Abbott, Esq., all in Cambridge, and the tenement houses for the Boston Co-operative Building Company on Harrison Avenue, Boston, also three dormitories for Phillips Andover Academy are among his works.

In 1893 visited Italy for three months of study. In 1896 partnership was dissolved, and offices taken with his brother, R. K. Longfellow, in the Tremont Building, Boston, under the firm name of A. W. Longfellow, Jr. Here among the works designed and carried out are the Phillips Brooks Memorial House at Cambridge, the Semitic Museum for Harvard College, and Bertram Hall, the first dormitory designed for Radcliffe College. In 1898 was appointed in competition architect of the Boston Elevated Railway Company; in 1900 a member of the Art Commission of Boston. This work, with general practice from Bar Harbor and Portland, Maine, to Cape Cod and Penllyn, Pennsylvania, where important houses have been built, and in and about Boston, have made a busy life.

Fellow American Institute of Architects, Boston Society of Architects; member Boston Architectural Club, Boston Art Students' Association, Society of Arts and Crafts.

FRANCIS CABOT LOWELL

Son of George Gardner (H. C., 1850) and Mary Ellen (Parker) Lowell: born at Boston, Massachusetts, January 7, 1855: prepared for college at G. W. C. Noble's School.

WAS abroad, 1876-77, and studied law at the Harvard Law School, 1877-79. Student in the office of C. P. Greenough, 1879-80. Admitted to the bar, 1880. Secretary to Chief Justice Gray, May, 1880, to February, 1882. Practised law, 1880-98, in partnership at different times with F. J. Stimson (H. C., 1876), A. L. Lowell (H. C., 1877), and L. M. Stockton (H. C., 1891). Overseer of Harvard College, 1886-93, 1894-95; fellow since 1895. Trustee of the Peabody Museum, 1885-97. Member of Boston Common Council, 1889-92. Published with A. L. Lowell a work on the "Transfer of Stock in Private Corporations," 1884; "Joan of Arc," 1896. Has written articles in the "Atlantic Monthly" and other magazines. In Massachusetts House of Representatives, 1895-98. Member of Massachusetts Historical Society, Colonial Society of Massachusetts, American Antiquarian Society, American Academy of Arts and Sciences. United States district judge for District of Massachusetts, 1898.

PERCIVAL LOWELL

Son of Augustus and Katharine Bigelow (Lawrence) Lowell: born at Boston, Massachusetts, March 13, 1855: prepared for college at G. W. C. Noble's School.

ON graduating went abroad, and travelled in Europe and the East for a year. On his return went into business; and later was for some months acting treasurer of the Massachusetts Cotton Mills. In the spring of 1883 he went to Japan, and settled in Tokio; from which place he came with the Korean Special Mission to the United States, as its foreign secretary and counsellor. This was the first embassy ever sent by Korea to a Western power. Lowell went back to Korea and spent the winter in the capital, Soöl, as the guest of the government. In December, 1884, he published an account of Korea, his experiences and observations, under the title of "Chosön, the Land of the Morning Calm," and in 1886 published "The Soul of the Far East," and in 1891 "Noto." He has been to Japan several times since as well as more than once round the world. In 1891 he discovered certain trance practices of the Shinto faith, which he then investigated and upon which he gave, in 1893, a course of lectures at the Lowell Institute. He afterwards published "Occult Japan" on the same subject. In 1894 he established the Lowell Observatory in Arizona for the special study of the planet Mars. From his work there he has published "Mars," 1895; "Annals of the Lowell Observatory," Vol. I, 1897, Vol. II, 1900, together with various papers in scientific journals. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, of the American Philosophical Society, of the Royal Asiatic Society, of the Corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

✱FRANK MACARTHUR

Son of Arthur and Aurelia (Belcher) MacArthur: born at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, September 20, 1853: prepared for college by Charles B. Young.

ENTERED the National University Law School in the fall of 1876, and the Patent Office as acting assistant examiner in July, 1877. Graduated from the National Law School in the summer of 1878, and entered the Columbia Law School, New York, in the fall of 1878. Was admitted to the bar in 1880. As a result of competitive examinations, was promoted in the Patent Office to third assistant examiner, second assistant, and first assistant. Was appointed law clerk of the Patent Office in 1881. Principal examiner in April, 1883, and examiner of interferences in August, 1883. He resigned July 31, 1886, to enter the law firm of Townsend and MacArthur of New York City.

He published "MacArthur's Patent Cases" in two volumes, which were complete reports of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in cases appealed from the Commissioner of Patents.

He started out in the practice of patent law in New York with the very brightest prospects. He was thoroughly equipped by education and natural ability for his chosen profession, and was untiring in his efforts to master everything brought before him. He possessed all the potentialities of the largest type of man, and it is safe to say, if his health had remained unimpaired, that he would have probably scored as brilliant a success as a lawyer as his brother, General Arthur MacArthur, has attained as a soldier. This promising career, however, was cut short by an untimely death, which occurred on December 1, 1889.

S. T. F.

FREDERICK CLEMENT McDUFFIE

Son of Charles Dennett and Laura Blodgett (Durgin) McDuffie: born at Salem, Massachusetts, August 3, 1855: prepared for college at Taunton High School.

AFTER graduation went to Lawrence, and with the exception of several months spent in travel, has been engaged in cotton manufacturing, more especially that of colored cotton goods, in the Everett Mills. Was appointed superintendent April 1, 1880, and on the 1st of April, 1881, made resident agent of the Everett Mills, Lawrence. He is treasurer of York Manufacturing Company and Everett Mills. Member of the School Committee and Republican City Committee; director of Merchants' National Bank; senior warden of Grace Episcopal Church and delegate for several years past to the Episcopal Convention of the Diocese of Massachusetts; member of the Board of Government of New England Cotton Manufacturers' Association.

✱ DANIEL CADY McMARTIN

Son of Duncan and Margaret (Cady) McMartin: born at Johnstown, New York, February 13, 1853: prepared for college by J. H. Wheeler.

SPENT the first two years after leaving college in the study of law in Johnstown, New York. In 1878 went West and settled in Des Moines, Iowa, where he was admitted to the bar in June, 1879, and practised his profession there. In the class report of 1894 McMartin wrote of his failing health and of his wandering among the Rocky Mountains in search of some place that would agree with him, and of his failure to find it. He died on the tenth day of August, 1895, at Beaman, Iowa, of consumption brought on by malaria contracted while living in Austin, Texas.

He was cheerful, unselfish, and he had the keenest sense of honor and fair dealing. He won an honorable name in his profession. He was popular in college and much loved in the community in which he lived.

LEONARD JARVIS MANNING

Son of Joseph Cogswell and Rebecca Parkman Jarvis (Livermore) Manning: born at Baltimore, Maryland, May 11, 1856: prepared for college three years in George G. Carey's Private School in Baltimore; one year in the Cambridge (Massachusetts) High School.

APRIL, 1877, received an appointment of sub-master in the Medford High School. The school has grown from the country high school of sixty to seventy-five pupils to the modern city high school of three to four hundred pupils.

Member of the Massachusetts Classical and High School Teachers' Association, of the Medford Teachers' Club, of the Medford Historical Society; vice-president of the Eastern Association of Physics Teachers; member of the Executive Board of the New England Association of Chemistry Teachers; secretary of the Parish Committee of the First Parish (Unitarian) Church of Medford; member of Unitarian Club of Medford—served as president two years; member of the Harvard Teachers' Association.

✠ WILLIAM MASON

Son of William and Harriet Augusta (Metcalf) Mason: born at Taunton, Massachusetts, October 21, 1855.

AFTER graduation went into the office of the Mason Machine Works at Taunton, in which he was an owner, and he remained in this employment until his death, in 1892. In college he was a member of the Institute, D. K. E., Hasty Pudding, and A. D. Clubs, and he was manager of the University Ball Nine. He was always courteous in his bearing and kind and generous to all whom he met. His health began to fail some years before he died.

HIRAM ROBERTS MILLS

Son of George E. and Mary (Roberts) Mills: born at Bloomfield, Connecticut, October 28, 1853: prepared for college at High School, Lexington, Massachusetts, and one year at Chauncy Hall School, Boston.

SOON after graduation went to Hartford and entered the office of Chamberlin and White for study of law. Admitted to the bar, in Connecticut, May 27, 1879. January 1, 1883, became a partner, and the firm name became Chamberlin, White and Mills. Has continued in the practice of the law at Hartford, and has now succeeded to the business of that firm, both Mr. Chamberlin and Mr. White having died.

✱ FRANCIS MINOT

Son of George Richards and Harriet (Jackson) Minot: born July 21, 1854: prepared for college at the well-known private school of Mr. E. S. Dixwell: died, unmarried, March 4, 1883.

HE entered well, and though not especially devoted to study, his natural ability, with his good preparation and his conscientious attention to his college duties, gave him the rank which ensured his election to the Phi Beta Kappa, while the respect and affection which his classmates felt for him was shown by his election into the Institute of 1770, the D. K. E., the Hasty Pudding, and the A. D.

For a few months in the year after graduation he was in the Harvard Law School, but the law not proving congenial to his artistic temperament, he studied architecture in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and afterwards in the office of Peabody and Stearns. Then he joined Mr. William R. Emerson, with whom he remained till the time of his death.

As we look back over the eighteen years since his death which to us have been so eventful, there seems to have been for Minot only the mere beginning of a life which we who knew and loved him, as all who knew him did, thought full of the richest promise. And yet, short as his life now seems to us to have been, we remember how noble and complete a life it was, how chivalrous and brave, how full of scorn for all that was base and mean, how ardent his love for all that was good and beautiful; and often since his death the memory of his friendship has lifted us above the mists and noise of our busy lives to those heights of our youth, where again we catch glimpses with him, and share again his noble enthusiasm in the glimpse, of "the radiance which was once so bright."

He was a descendant of William Minot (H. C., 1802), George Richards Minot (H. C., 1778), and Stephen Minot (H. C., 1730). R. H. G.

WILLIAM HENRY MOODY

Son of Henry L. and Melissa A. (Emerson) Moody: born at Newbury, Massachusetts, December 23, 1853: prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Andover.

AFTER graduation entered the Harvard Law School, remaining there only a few months, and then pursued the study of law in the office of the late Richard H. Dana of Boston; was admitted to the bar in April, 1878, and began the practice of law at Haverhill, Massachusetts, in association with Edwin N. Hill (H. C., 1872), under the firm name of Hill and Moody. Later became a partner of Joseph K.

Jenness, under the firm name of Jenness and Moody, and upon Mr. Jenness's death formed a partnership with Horace E. Bartlett, under the firm name of Moody and Bartlett, which continued until his election to Congress. He was city solicitor of Haverhill in the years 1888 and 1889 and has been special counsel for the city in cases of importance many times since. He served as district attorney for the Eastern District of Massachusetts, which is coextensive with Essex County, from January 1, 1890, to January 1, 1896. During all this time he was actively engaged in the general practice of law, but more especially in the trial of causes in Court.

Upon the death of William Cogswell, representative in Congress from the Sixth Massachusetts District, at a special election in November, 1895, he was elected representative in the Fifty-fourth Congress from that district, and has been re-elected to the Fifty-fifth, Fifty-sixth, and Fifty-seventh (the coming) Congresses. It may not be out of place to say that the four nominations and elections have been substantially without opposition.

In the Fifty-fourth Congress served on the Committee on Elections; in the Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth Congresses on the Committee on Appropriations and was appointed a member of the Committee on Insular Affairs when that committee was created with jurisdiction over Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands. He was appointed a member of the Congressional Commission to investigate the Postal Service of the United States, a work which occupied much time and required a large amount of labor. In the meantime has kept up the practice of law so far as it was possible to do consistently with the demands of public office. Has published nothing, except a few fugitive articles in periodical publications and some addresses and speeches.

Is a member of the Masonic and Pythian orders and Order of Elks; is a member of the clubs in his own city, the Salem Club, University Club of Boston, and the Metropolitan Club at Washington; was a member of Pi Eta Club in college.

FRANK HATCH MORGAN

Son of Charles and Emily (Hatch) Morgan: born at Le Roy, New York, March 14, 1852: prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Exeter, New Hampshire.

AFTER graduation did editorial writing for Western New York Democratic papers. After some teaching at the Academy at Le Roy, New York, became associate editor, in 1877, on the "Buffalo Courier and Republic." In 1878 became editor of "The Index," Meadville, Pennsylvania, and later its manager. Established the "Le Roy Times" in 1881. For several years was on the editorial staff of the "Buffalo Commercial." In 1895 removed to Boston, where he is now manager and director in industrial and other companies with whose establishment he has been identified. A daughter, Agnes B. Morgan, is a member of the class of 1901, Radcliffe College.

WILLIAM RUSSELL MORSE

Son of William Bartlett (Yale, 1837) and Elizabeth Knights (Russell) Morse: born at Charlestown, Massachusetts, August 9, 1854: prepared for college at Charlestown High School.

TAUGHT ever since graduation, being at present one of the masters in the Public Latin School, Boston, Massachusetts.

ARTHUR ST. JOHN NEWBURY

Son of John Strong Newbury, M. D., LL. D., etc., and Sarah Brownell (Gaylord) Newbury: born at Cleveland, Ohio, December 17, 1853: prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy.

STUDIED law for two years in the office of Ranney and Ranney, Cleveland, Ohio. Admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of Ohio, October 1, 1878, and to the United States Circuit Court, May 2, 1879. In December, 1880, was assistant counsel and assistant secretary of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company and also secretary of the Rocky River Railway Company. In 1892 secretary and treasurer and in 1897 president of the Sandusky Portland Cement Company. Still practising law, making cement, etc. Member Union and University Clubs, Cleveland. His daughter Winifred Eells is at Smith College, class of 1904.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS NICKERSON

Son of Joseph and Louisa (Winslow) Nickerson: born at Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, January 12, 1854: prepared for college at Eliot High School, Jamaica Plain.

AFTER graduation attended the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1879. He has had the care of large estates and has been actively engaged as a director in the successful reorganization of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad. He is also president of the Arlington Mills and a director of several other railroads, banking and manufacturing corporations. Member of the Massachusetts Legislature of 1901. Clubs: Somerset, St. Botolph, Tavern, Country, and Dedham Polo. At college D. K. E., Hasty Pudding, and A. D.

JOHN BARTOW OLMSTED

Son of John R. and Elizabeth M. Olmsted: born at Le Roy, New York, January 28, 1854: prepared for college at Le Roy Academy and Phillips Exeter Academy.

STUDIED law in the office of Sprague, Gorham and Bacon, Buffalo, New York. Was admitted to the bar of New York State in January, 1879. After marriage travelled abroad and attended lectures at Heidelberg University; returned to this country in 1880, and began the practice of law at Le Roy, New York. Became a member of the Buffalo Civil Service Reform Club, and took an active part in that movement, being for ten years a member of the Executive Committee and treasurer of the Association; and in the presidential campaign of 1880 was president of the Le Roy "Garfield and Arthur Club." In the year 1882 returned to Buffalo and began the practice of law and was one of the counsel for the State of New York in the proceedings to take the Niagara Falls park lands. In November, 1885, he accepted the position of attorney for the Pitts Agricultural Works, now Buffalo Pitts Company, a large corporation in Buffalo engaged in the manufacture of threshing machinery, road rollers and engines, and is still connected with that company as director and as its attorney. Was secretary of the Harvard Association of Western New York, and is now president of the same. In the campaign of 1884 was secretary of the Cleveland Republican Club of Erie County. Is a member of the Executive Committee of the "Thursday" and "Fortnightly" Clubs, and trustee of the Buffalo Seminary and of the Elmwood School. Civil service commissioner of the city of Buffalo. A member of the Saturn Club of Buffalo and was "dean" of that club during 1898-99. Is president of the "Liberal" Club of Buffalo. Member of the Committee on Sports and Athletics of Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo. Was curator of the Buffalo Library.

Of his children, John M. Olmsted graduated at Phillips Exeter Academy in 1898, and entered Harvard with class of 1902. Charles M. Olmsted is in Harvard, 1903, and Remington Olmsted hopes to enter Harvard with the class of 1905.

Son of John Boardman and Mary Ann (Reynolds) Page: born at Rutland, Vermont, October 21, 1850: prepared for college at Rutland High School.

✱CHARLES PRATT STRONG

Son of Frederick Simpson and Sarah Frances (Pratt) Strong: born at Springfield, Massachusetts, December 19, 1855: prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy.

GRADUATED at Harvard, 1881. House-surgeon to Boston Lying-in Hospital, the Free Hospital for Women, and the Massachusetts General Hospital; physician to out-patients at Massachusetts General Hospital; surgeon to out-patients at Free Hospital for Women; fellow Massachusetts Medical Society; member Boston Society for Medical Improvement and Boston Society for Medical Observation; assistant in gynæcology Harvard Medical School, 1887-93. He died March 15, 1893.

On April 7, 1894, a check for $3750 was sent to the Faculty of the Harvard Medical School. This sum was made up of contributions by the friends and patients of Dr. Strong, and was intended to found the Charles Pratt Strong Scholarship, in memory of him. The fund was accepted by the Faculty, and later by the Corporation, and the scholarship has been established with an available income for the first year of $100. The balance of the income is to be added to the principal until the latter amounts to $5000.

The "Boston Medical and Surgical Journal" says: "Dr. Strong began his professional career as a general practitioner. He had a special inclination to gynæcology and surgery, and to these branches his skill and energy were more and more directed. As a physician he combined rare judgment with infinite tact and patience. His sympathy and gentleness gave courage, and his decision and firmness gave strength to his patients. He had a winning personality, and a rare perception of the needs of the sick. He was untiring in his attempts to promote the comfort and health of those in his care. He had all the instincts of a surgeon. He was bold, skilful, and progressive. He was likewise cautious and conservative, striving to accomplish the desired results by the least radical measure, but never hesitating when radical measures were essential. His power of manipulation and touch were remarkable, and his advice and skill were much in demand by his medical brethren. He was a careful student of medical literature, and his own papers were always clear and forceful and written with a well-defined intention. He contributed much to the advancement of gynæcology in this city by his methods and by his writings. He was an excellent teacher as well as a skilful operator. He was modest and refined, thoughtful of others, and a delightful companion. His life was simple and devoid of ostentation. The dominating influences of his life were his love of home and of his profession. It was these influences which led him to give of his strength so lavishly. The amount of charitable work which he accomplished at the hospitals with which he was connected was very large. His entire time, from morning until night, often until late at night, was given to his patients, private and charitable. It was this immense burden of work which reduced his vital powers, and made him an easy victim to disease. The attack of acute septicæmia of which he died followed, after an interval of one day, an operation for septic peritonitis, which he performed upon a friend and patient, but it was not the result of carelessness nor of any discoverable injury. Apparently the entering poison met no resistance, and almost before any warning had been given death came. So ends a young life, full of great promise, full of great accomplishments, all too soon, but as the result of an effort to save another's life."

THOMAS LINCOLN TALBOT

❖ WILLIAM FLETCHER WELD

*Son of William Gordon and Caroline Langdon (Goddard)
Weld: born at Boston, Massachusetts, February 21, 1855:
prepared for college at Mr. John Hopkinson's School, Boston.*

IN college he was a member of the Institute of 1770, the Δ K E, A. D. Club, Hasty Pudding Club, the Cricket Club, Cambridge Telegraph Company, and was captain of the team in the Rifle Club. He was captain and bow-oar of the Class Six, which won the Beacon Cup race in 1874, and he rowed in his Class Crew at Springfield in 1873. He contested at Saratoga in 1875 for the intercollegiate single scull championship.

He passed two years at the Harvard Law School and in 1882 founded a professorship of law in that school.

Weld's love of outdoor sports and of the sea was strong. From 1879 until his death he was an enthusiastic yachtsman. In 1882 he built the cruising schooner "Gitana," on which for a long time he made his home, taking long ocean cruises: three to the West Indies and two to the Mediterranean, besides summer cruises along the Atlantic Coast. In 1885 he was one of the "syndicate" who built the "Puritan," the successful "cup defender" of that year. He was commodore of the Hull and later of the Eastern Yacht Club, and he was a practical navigator and thorough yachtsman, far-seeing and cool-headed.

From 1882 until the time of his death he was one of the trustees of the large estate left by his grandfather, the late William F. Weld. He was a member of the Algonquin, Art, Athletic, Country, Puritan, Somerset, St. Botolph, Union, Myopia, Union Boat, Eastern, Hull, and New York Yacht Clubs.

He died of diphtheria at his beautiful place in Brookline on January 9, 1893. He left Harvard College a legacy of one hundred thousand dollars for general purposes.

Weld was a man of the broadest generosity; he received his greatest pleasure from making those about him happy. No one who ever was a guest on board of his yacht or at his house can forget his thoughtful hospitality. He had a keen interest in public affairs, in science, art, and literature, and his active mind and shrewd common sense made him a man of influence wherever he went. He looked at his wealth as a trust fund to be used by him in helping the community in which he lived. He was the most loyal of Harvard men, and it is pleasant to think that the benefactions which he and his family have heaped upon the college will keep the name of Weld dear to Harvard men.

FRANCIS LEWIS WELLMAN

WHILE in college he was one of the founders of the Harvard "Lampoon," and a member of the Hasty Pudding and A. D. Clubs, the Institute of 1770, the Delta Kappa Epsilon, and the O. K. In 1876 he entered the law office of Brooks, Ball and Storey, in Boston, and in the autumn of the next year became a student at the Harvard Law School, took degree of LL. B., 1878, and was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in April, 1879. In the autumn of that year he began the practice of his profession in Boston. In November, 1893, Governor Russell appointed him chairman of the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners of Massachusetts, serving until July, 1894, when he resigned. In the following September he argued, with the late Governor Russell, the question of the legal construction of that part of the tariff bill relating to the wool schedule before the Secretary of the Treasury at Washington.

In 1893 and 1894 was a member of the Democratic State Committee and chairman of its finance committee. He was active in campaign work, and managed three congressional campaigns for the late John F. Andrew (H. C., 1872), two of them to a successful issue. In 1892 he was an alternate delegate to the National Democratic Convention, and for three years he served on Governor Russell's staff. In March, 1896, he was appointed assistant corporation counsel of the City of Boston, and later an assistant city solicitor, resigning in September, 1900, and resumed private practice. He was, from August, 1897, to August, 1898, acting park commissioner of Boston. Is a member of the Somerset and Union Clubs of Boston, University Club, New York, the Myopia Hunt Club of Hamilton, Massachusetts, and the Bar Association of the City of Boston.

TEMPORARY MEMBERS OF THE CLASS

WALTER SCOTT ANDREWS

Son of Loring and Blandina Bruyn (Hardenbergh) Andrews: born at Bronxville, New York, October 25, 1852: prepared for college at Easthampton, Massachusetts (Wiliston Seminary).

GRADUATED at Columbia College Law School, and was admitted to the New York Bar in 1883. For about ten months in 1887-88 was employed on the staff of the "New York World." Took his degree of A. B. in 1877, and that of A. M., Harvard, in 1898. Is at present interested in the work of the University Settlement and of the Legal Aid Society of New York City. Was abroad most of the time between 1890 and 1897.

WILLIAM HERBERT ATKINSON

Son of Rev. Kinsman and Dorothy Mirack (Woods) Atkinson: born at Lunenburg, Massachusetts, June 28, 1853.

GRADUATED in the classical course of the Cambridge High School in 1871, and entered Harvard without conditions. Joined the class of 1876 at the beginning of their Junior year. In September, 1876, entered, one year in advance, Drew Theological School at Madison, New Jersey, and in November, 1877, began his ministry at Worcester, Massachusetts. He has been pastor of churches in the following places: Shelburne Falls, Wilbraham, Prescott, Worthington, Leyden, Blandford, and Princeton in Massachusetts. In April, 1890, he joined the Vermont Conference at Brattleboro, Vermont. He became pastor of churches at Mechanicsville and Cuttingsville. At the latter place during his term of service a new church was built, and dedicated free of debt, May 13, 1891. Following this has served churches at Milton and West Berkshire, Vermont, also at Fairfax, Highgate, and Worcester.

He writes: "I am pastor of Methodist Episcopal Church at Worcester, Vermont, very near Montpelier. I have a fine church, and enjoy the regular work of a Methodist minister, in which I have spent twenty-three years."

✱JOHN RICHARD BALDWIN

Son of Horace Converse and Ellen Elizabeth (Condon) Baldwin: born at Lynn, Massachusetts, May 10, 1854: prepared for college at Lynn High School: died at Lynn, May 1, 1897.

AFTER graduation in 1877, Baldwin studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1880. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession and formed a partnership under the name of Baldwin and Baker. He was elected to the School Committee in Lynn in 1879 and 1882, for terms of three years each, and was chairman of the School Board in 1880, 1881, and 1882. In 1881 he was elected a senator from the First Essex District of Massachusetts, defeating for re-election Henry Cabot Lodge, and was re-elected in 1882-83. In December, 1884, he was elected mayor of Lynn. In 1885 his legal partnership was dissolved, and from that time until his death he practised law in Lynn. In March, 1889, he was elected city solicitor, and served continuously up to the time of his death. A mere perusal of his life-work indicates the constant activity and mental alertness which were his striking characteristics, and his success in the practice of law and in the political offices which he held was marked. It must have been particularly satisfactory to him that in the city where he was born and had lived all his life he was recognized as an active and influential citizen, and that he was sought out by his fellow-citizens to represent them in high places. Although he died so early he had accomplished more and attained a higher position than many a man who lives to the extreme limit of life. His death resulted from inflammation of the ear, which is said to have been due to an accident in 1884, when he was thrown from a horse and received a severe concussion of the brain. He was ill for only a few days, and his death came as a great surprise and sorrow to his friends. *

CHARLES JOSEPH BELLAMY

Son of Rufus K. and Maria L. (Putnam) Bellamy: born at Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts, May 7, 1852: prepared for college at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Massachusetts.

✕HENRY GILMAN NICHOLS

Son of John Taylor Gilman and Caroline Matilda (Tucker) Nichols: born at Saco, Maine, July 10, 1854: prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy.

HE graduated in the class of 1877, and then studied for a year in the Harvard Law School. Leaving Cambridge, he went to Philadelphia, where he studied law in an office for a year, and at the same time taught in a school, but the next year he returned to the Law School and finished his preparation for the bar. He was admitted in 1881 and immediately entered the office of Shattuck, Holmes and Munroe, but soon left it for the office of Benjamin F. Brooks, with whom he later formed a partnership. Upon the death of Mr. Brooks in 1887 he succeeded to his large business and continued in the practice of his profession until his death at the early age of forty-six years. Such is the brief outline of a busy life.

"But though, like every lawyer whose years are spent in active practice, Mr. Nichols perhaps did little which will give him any lasting fame, he is not likely ever to be forgotten either by his associates at the bar or by the clients who were fortunate enough to secure his services.

"His first and most striking quality was innate, unswerving honesty. His mental processes were direct, his approaches were frank, and he inspired all who met him, whether opponents or clients, with confidence in his desire to accomplish justice. While tenacious of his clients' rights, he recognized the rights of others, and his invariable purpose was so to deal with any litigation or complication as to secure results of which no one could rightly complain. His connection with a case was an assurance of fair play, and his own personal interest never influenced his advice or his action.

"To this clear-grained character, the first essential of true professional success, he added rare business judgment, untiring industry, indefatigable patience, conciliatory temper, and excellent legal attainments.

"Men and women were naturally attracted by him. They were sure that his interest in them was genuine, and he won confidence and friendship on every hand. His wholesome, unaffected, cordial, sympathetic humanity made him welcome everywhere, and the circle of his friends was constantly widened. But his was no weak nature, avoiding all occasion for dispute. His capacity for generous indignation was great, his contempt for trickery or selfishness found warm and forcible expression. He won his friends by compelling their respect and he did not hesitate to condemn a wrong for fear of making an enemy.

"The opportunity to show his quality came to him early and his ability was recognized at once. In the busy office of Mr. Brooks he was engaged from the outset in important matters and he won his way steadily upward. Great trusts sought him and he became more and more immersed in the conduct of large affairs and the solution of complicated problems. Never sparing himself he came more than once dangerously near the limit of his physical endurance, and was forced to rest, but no sooner did his strength return than he plunged with renewed vigor into his work, uninstructed by experience, and perhaps had he been more thoughtful of himself, his years might have been longer.

"When out of a clear sky came the dreadful message that his days were numbered and that his busy and useful life with all its promise of happiness and success must soon end, he bore the blow with a cheerful courage that commanded admiration. He made such arrangements as were necessary to settle his affairs, and then, through weeks of agonizing pain awaited the end, with no sign of weakness or unavailing regret, thinking only how he could make the inevitable easier to his family and his friends, and accepting his own fate with wonderful fortitude.

"A wise counsellor, a devoted friend, an able lawyer, an honest man, he has left a gap in our ranks which can hardly be filled, and there are none who will not always regret his untimely death. His career may teach us all the lesson too easily forgotten, that true success at the bar is only won by faithfully adhering to the high ideals of our profession." Resolutions of the Boston Bar Association.

CLASS MEETINGS, CLASS FUND ET CÆTERA

CLASS MEETINGS, 1895-1901

ON October 25, 1895, a meeting of the Class was held at Number 40 Water Street, Boston, and appropriate resolutions were offered by Amory on the death of William L. Chase, and adopted. The Class Committee were authorized to appoint a Class Secretary. In March, 1896, J. T. Wheelwright was appointed Class Secretary by the Class Committee in accordance with the above vote, and he began his duties on March 15.

On Commencement Day, June 24, 1896, the Class met at 19 Hollis. The Twentieth Anniversary dinner was given at the Country Club, Brookline, at seven o'clock P.M. Fifty members drove out from Cambridge and through the Boston Park System to the Country Club.

On Commencement Day, June 30, 1897, the Class met at 19 Hollis. A committee consisting of A. W. Longfellow and E. M. Wheelwright was appointed to report upon the proposed gift of the Class to the College in 1901.

On Commencement Day, June 29, 1898, the Class met at 19 Hollis. The committee appointed at the previous meeting reported in favor of building a memorial tablet and a section of an ornamental fence about the College yard.

On Tuesday, June 27, 1899, the Class dined at the Country Club, Brookline. Nearly fifty members were present. The subject of the gift to the College was discussed. On Commencement Day, June 28, the Class met at 19 Hollis. The following committee was appointed to collect funds and to erect a gate on the foot-path entrance between Holworthy and Stoughton Halls, and a section of fence behind Holworthy: Amory, Berry, Bowditch, Gaff, G. W. Green, E. M. Wheelwright, and the Secretary ex officio.

On Commencement Day, June 27, 1900, the Class met at 19 Hollis. The Committee upon the Gift reported that the Corporation had granted the desired location, and a perspective drawing by Messrs. McKim, Mead and White of the proposed Gate and fence was submitted and approved.

HOLWORTHY GATE

THE committee in charge met for organization in September, 1899. Harcourt Amory was elected Treasurer of the fund to be collected. The construction of the gate was begun in July, 1900, and the work was substantially completed in eight months. The total cost of the gate has amounted to nearly $6000, which has been already subscribed by members of the Class, and in memory of George H. Bradford by his brother, and in memory of William L. Chase and William F. Weld by their widows. On the outer escutcheon of the shield over the gate is the inscription
